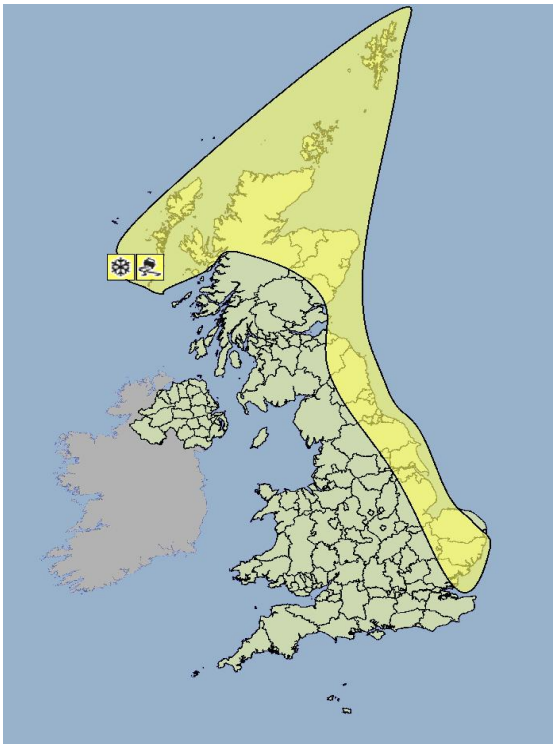
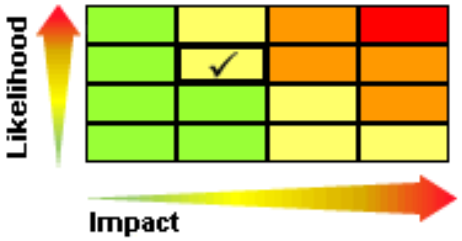
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Showers, falling as a messy mix of rain, sleet and snow, will push into northern and eastern parts of the UK on Monday afternoon and last through much of the night. These will lead to icy stretches forming as surface temperatures rapidly fall below freezing from early Monday evening. Some small further snow accumulations are also possible in places.

The showers will gradually die out from the north overnight, but will likely persist for much of the period in parts of southeast England.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow and Ice

Valid from 15:00 on Mon, 11th Dec 2017 until 11:00 on Tue, 12th Dec 2017

Ice is expected to form on some surfaces from mid afternoon Monday, and overnight into Tuesday morning. Wintry showers may also bring some fresh snowfalls, mostly to higher ground. Accumulations of 2-5 cm area possible, again mostly above 100-150 m in places in eastern Scotland and eastern England.

Some roads and railways are likely to be affected with some journey times taking longer. There will probably be icy stretches on some untreated roads, pavements and cycle paths with some injuries from slips trips and falls.
